THIS DATE IN MAGIC HISTORY – JANUARY 27...

January 27, 2020 – Orlando Magic television producer Tye Eastham actually opens and uses the game notes for the first time to have his team build a graphic for that night's game at Miami. Eastham is not likely to look at the notes again until 2030, preferring to ask the communications department for things instead.

January 27, 2010 – The NBA announced that Orlando Magic center Dwight Howard led all Eastern Conference players, and was second overall, in the NBA All-Star Balloting program presented by T-Mobile with 2,099,204 votes. It marked Howard's fifth straight appearance in the NBA All-Star Game and fourth consecutive time voted a starter.

January 27, 2008 – Hedo Turkoglu hit a fade-away 3-pointer from the top of the key at the buzzer, giving the Magic a 96-93 victory over the Boston Celtics in front of a packed crowd at Amway Arena. Ray Allen tied the ballgame up at 93 with a 3-pointer from the corner with 14.1 seconds remaining, setting the stage for Turkoglu's buzzer-beater. The Magic's second straight buzzer-beating win at home marked the fourth consecutive win at Amway Arena. Turkoglu led five Magic double figure scorers with a game-high 27 points. Dwight Howard tallied another double-double with 18 points and a game-high 16 rebounds.

January 27, 2001 – The Magic came close to eclipsing their all-time record low in scoring futility during an 81-59 loss to Miami at home. The 59 points by Orlando were a season-low, and the 21 second half points were a franchise low. The lone bright spot for the Magic was Tracy McGrady's 19-point, 15-rebound performance. The loss served as a wake-up call, as Orlando then ripped off nine straight wins, tying the franchise-high for consecutive victories.

January 27, 1994 – The NBA announced that Shaquille O'Neal was selected as the starting center for the 44th All-Star Game. O'Neal became the first rookie to start an All-Star Game.
